How to use this journal

Over the next 90 days, this journal is a gentle companion — a quiet, judgment-free space to notice how you're doing, and to take small steps forward. There is no wrong way to use it. Some days you'll write pages; other days a single line is more than enough.

Each day

Fill in a Daily Page — a quick mood check, a short prompt, and space for notes.

Each week

Pause at the Weekly Reflection to notice patterns and choose one simple next step.

When it's heavy

Turn to "Finding Your Way Forward" to untangle a worry into a small action.

Whenever you like

Color a page, write an affirmation, or revisit a memory. This is your space.

One small step at a time. You are not alone in this.

A GENTLE TOOL

Finding Your Way Forward

Healing asks for patience. When it feels slow, this small step can help you focus on what's within reach today.

1. What feels heavy right now? (Name it plainly.)

2. What part of this is outside my control? (I can set it down.)

3. What is one small thing that IS within my control?

4. The single next step I can take today is...

5. Someone I could reach out to for help is...

6. A truth or hope I want to hold onto is...

BEFORE WE BEGIN

Where I am right now

What I'm recovering from is...

The kind of rest I need most right now is...

The people supporting my healing are...

What feeling like myself again looks like is...

HOLD ONTO THESE

Words for the hard days

Rest is how we heal.

Be patient with your body.

Brighter days are coming.

Healing is not always linear.

Small progress is still progress.

You are doing the quiet, hard work of getting well.

Listen to what your body needs.

Each day of rest is a step forward.

How I feel today

Today's reflection

How is my body feeling today, honestly?

One small win today

WEEK 1

Weekly reflection & a simple next step

What helped me this week?

What was hard — and what did I learn from it?

My one simple resolution for next week:

This week I made time to...

☐

Rest

☐

Move gently

☐

Connect with someone

☐

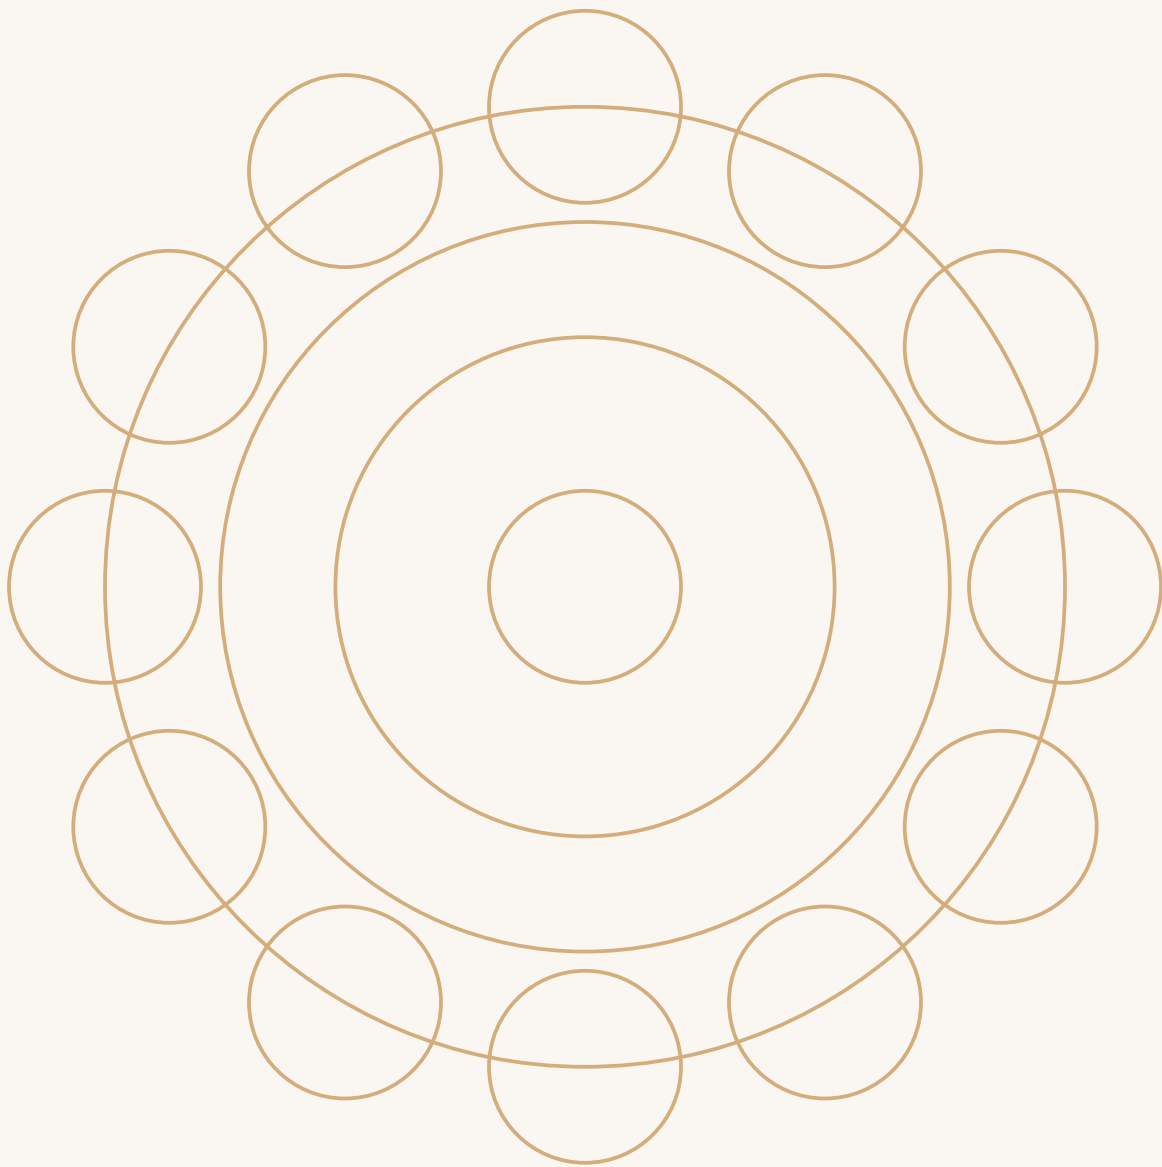

Ask for help

☐

Do one thing for me

TAKE A BREATH

A quiet space to color

Let your mind rest while your hands create.

This is just a taste.
